Program Focus:

This International Leadership Conference is an annual event organized by the Aimskills World Management Training Center. Our theme "Leading For The Present and Future Schools" is designed to draw the attention of school leaders/heads to the VUCA World (volatile, uncertain, complex, ambiguous) world where old leadership and management patterns do not seem to hold anymore and where the new leaders come at a faster pace. What would be a sufficiently and effectively responsive leadership style? Will there be a greater role for community and is there a need for such a role? Can parents be brought in as partners in this process and not just stakeholders? The aim of AimSkills is to provide new trends and brilliant insights into inter-related strands: the processes and dynamics of change and the leadership skills needed to succeed in leading and managing teacher performance, and delivering the best outcomes where the standards for teachers and school leaders are now explicitly stated. Leading, managing, and delivering effective educational change in an intensively political, social and economic environment is a challenge that all educational leaders face as a critical aspect of their roles and responsibilities. New policies and strategic directions imposed from outside and within systems are constantly evolving to challenge current mind-sets and skills.

Aspiring school principals will gain competitive advantage with this training, a potential learning in School Leadership being the hardest area in fighting for principalship. The brilliant insights from this program will impact their minds to innovative thinking to a critical understanding of today's leadership and management tools, principles and content required of today's credible and highly qualified principals to take the position in running schools in today's VUCA world. School leaders must now enroll trainings and programs to keep updated in understanding leadership and managerial systems that fits schools in a VUCA world.
