Bituen is a group of volunteers that conduct eco and sustainability forums and workshops as well as provide seedlings, seeds, and plants in city schools since December 2013. They also distribute free quality books to poor children all over the country linking with individuals and organizations to set up mini-libraries for the poor.

Over the years, the group of Bituen has developed their system of integrating waste management with greening the environment focused at establishing and sustaining Gulayan sa Paaralan in city schools and encouraging various groups to do their share as individuals through these forums and workshops.

We now would like to offer our forum/workshop to your Company not only to maximize and consolidate efforts to reduce waste and increase gardening where it seems impossible, but also to make our environment safer and healthier.

Each session ends with each participant not only reducing his/her waste but also starting his/her own actual garden right in the office or even at home, in the most cost-effective manner.
